

ABSTRACT

Content according to the present invention includes scripts, each of which is associated with an identifier of an electronic device in which device the script is executed. Upon receipt of the content, an electronic device specifies, using an identifier of the device, a script(s) to be executed in the electronic device and executes only the specified script(s). As a result, an application program suitable for the electronic device is provided to and executed on the electronic device.